HOUSE.

Washington, February 26.—The house to-day passed a bill allowing the unexpended belance of the appropria-tion for the construction of a branch mint at San Francisco, to be used in the continuation of the work. In the course of the discussion on the bill, Mr. Beck condemned the interpretation given by the treasury department to the law which required unexpended balances to be covered into the treasury every two years. By that interpretation, seventytwo million dollars were now in the treasury, to be used at the discretion of

THE CENTENNIAL.

Message of the President, Submitting the Report of the Commissioners, and "To Add a Word in Way of Recommendation."

WASHINGTON, February 25.-The President to-day sent the following message to congress: To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have the honor herewith to submit the report of the centennial commissioners, and to add a word in the way of recommendation. There have now been international expositions held by three of the great powers of Europe. It seems fitting that the one hundredth anniversary of our independence should be as the highest. A failure in this enterprise would be deplorable. Success can gressional legislation is necessary to fold by the commingling of the people from all sections of our own country, by bringing together the people progress in manufactures, agriculture, art, science, and civil station. The sethe galaxy of nations as an independent people, emanated from the same spot. We have much in a varied climate, profit, and in return they will bring to our shores works of their skill, and familiarize our people with them to the give it an international character, to which our self-esteem aspires.

THE ECLECTIC, for March, is a splendid number, containing in full the remarkable lecture "On Missions," which Professor Max Muller delivered in Westminster Abbey, on December 3, 1873, and which has excited such marked interest in literary and religious circles in England. The number also contains the opening chapters of "Far from the Madding Crowd," a novel so striking as to lead the London Speciator to say that "if it was not written by George Ellot, then a new light has risen above the literary horizon. Besides these two articles and the well-filled editorial department, the contents are: "Sir Edwin Landsser," by Miss Thackery; "Dreams, Visions and Eestacies;" "The Swallows;" "Henry Thorean, the Poet-Naturalist;" "Irish Poetical Humor;" "What to Believe in Science;" "Spanish Life and Character in the Interior during the Summer of 1873;" "The Shadows of Death," by the author of "John Hailfax, Gentleman;" "Some Unpublished Letters of Elizabeth Earreit Honen. 1873;" "The Shadowa or Denderman;" "Some Un-of "John Hailfax, Gentleman;" "Some Un-published Letters of Elizabeth Barrett Brown Vonfessions of Doctors;" phonshed Letters of Edizabeth Barrett Brown-ing;" "Florence;" Confessions of Doctors;" "Glaciers;" "Restoration of the Ancient Mo-ghal Buildings at Agra;" "The Lost Elixir;" the conclusion of "Spring Floods;" and a sketch of "Richard Anthony Proctor," ac-companied by an excellent portrait on steel.
